With approximately 340 days of sunshine and six kilometres of soft white sands, Agadir is Morocco's premiere beach resort! Nestled among the verdant valleys of the Great Souss and with the majestic range of the Anti-Atlas rearing up behind it, this modern, cosmopolitan city has all the attendant pleasures, thrills and luxuries you can ask for.

THE CITY

The beating heart of Agadir around which everything revolves is its spectacular crescent shaped bay. The white sandy beach, which stretches for as far as the eye can see, provides some of the safest bathing in Morocco and is the daytime destination for most visitors.

Whether it is soaking up the sun, taking a camel ride or catching some waves, the beach provides something for all tastes. Tracing the curve of the bay is Boulevard 20 Aout, Agadir's main thoroughfare along which you will find many of its exclusive hotels and beachside resorts and a host of cafés, bars and restaurants.

One block from here, you will find the city's main shopping area, centred on Boulevard Hassan II and Avenue du Prince Moulay Abdullah. Further inland is the area of New Talborjt, where most of Agadir's budget accommodation is to be found.

DO & SEE

Photo: flexarorion

To get a taste of the hustle and bustle of old Agadir, head down to the port where you can watch the fishermen bring in the daily catch, head out to the souk and do a spot of bartering, or trek up to the remains of the 16th-century Kasbah and take in the spectacular sights of the bay.

Agadir Beach

Agadir's top attraction is the six mile crescent shaped beach, soak up the sun, splash in the surf and enjoy! Speaking of surf - there are many places in Agadir that are well suited for surfing, a few examples are Devils rock, Imesouane bay and Ankhor point. If you are interested in learning to surf there are a number of schools and camps to help you get started.

Address: Devils Rock, Agadir

Kasbah

Built in 1540, all that remains of the old Kasbah are the fortified walls, however, the trip up the hill to this historic site is worth it for the view alone.

Engraved into the hill in Arabic are the words God, King and Country. The Moroccans are prohibited to speak anything bad about any of these three things. If you are interested in history you can easily find a professional guide here to take you on a tour.

Address: Kasbah, Agadir

More Info: Hilltop 7 km northwest of the town

Souk al-Had

Immerse yourself in the sights and sounds of Agadir's walled souk and get ready to barter for your souvenirs! A "souk" is a term of a central, local market in an Arabic city selling spices, textiles and jewellery.

If you take a taxi to the Souk al-Had you should ask for it by name, since some taxi drivers take you to their own personal souk. You recognize the real souk by its ochre wall and the numbered gates.

Address: Rue de 18 Novembre, Agadir

More Info: Off Rue de 18 Novembre

Fishing Port

If you're looking to taste the hustle and bustle of a typically Moroccan town, then head for the fishing port. It is a great place to wander around, take pictures and maybe buy your own fish that you can cook at home.

Address: Fishing Port, Agadir

More Info: Follow Boulevard Mohammed V 1.5 km East

La Médina d'Agadir

La Médina d'Agadir is a fascinating reconstruction of a typical Moroccan Berber village. It was built using traditional building techniques and local materials. Today, visitors can stroll the alleys and shop in the many small boutiques.

SHOPPING

Be it bartering in the bustle of the souk or ambling in the air-conditioned luxury of the stores in the new town, Agadir will cater for your every need. Whether it is hand crafted ceramics, leather garments, carved figurines or spices for that tagine you're going to impress the folks back home with, be sure to have hard cash and to never accept the first price.

In the new town, the main shopping is situated around Boulevard Hassan II and Avenue du Prince Moulay Abdullah. You will find numerous boutiques and department stores selling a range of fashion items, as well as souvenir shops selling all manner of Moroccan trinkets and charms.

However, for the authentic Moroccan shopping experience, head for the walled Souk al-Had and wander around the winding alleys, breathe in the sights, sounds and smells of this lively marketplace. Here, you will find farmers selling their freshly grown produce, spices that scent the air and that are finely sculpted into pyramids, metalwork that has been skilfully manipulated into the most ornate lanterns, all this and a myriad of other curiosities and oddities are waiting to be discovered in the secret alleys of the souk.

Al-Massira Airport

Al-Massira Airport is located 28 km from the centre. To get to and from the airport you can take bus or taxi.

Local bus number 22 goes from the airport to Inezgane, a suburb to Agadir. The last bus leaves at 20.30 and the fare is 4 Dirham. From Inezgane to Agadir city centre you can take bus number 20, 24 or 28 and the cost for that ticket is 3 Dirham. If you rather take a shared taxi it will cost you the same.

A taxi from the airport to Agadir costs approximately 200 Dirham. The trip takes about 20 minutes.

It is also possible to hire a vehicle from any of the car rentals at the airport.

Public Transport

The central parts of Agadir are walk-able, but if you are tired there are plenty of local buses to take you to nearby beaches or suburbs of the city. Remember to have coins to pay the ticket since the driver doesn't carry a lot of change. The fare is 5-10 Dirhams.

The main local bus station is located next to the main grand taxi rank at the south end of Rue de Fes, approx. 20 minutes drive from the city centre. It is very usual to arrive at Inezgane though, which is the bus hub of the region.

Address: Rue de Fes, Agadir
More Info: Prices updated November 2013

Taxi

By far the easiest and quickest way to get around town is by the cream-coloured Grand taxi or the orange Petit taxi. You find them either from the taxi rank at the South end of Rue de Fes or Rue Yacoub el-Mansour in New Talborjt or by hailing one off the street.

The Petit taxis are only allowed to drive inside the city. The Grand taxis only take at least 6 passengers, but you can also pay extra and hire the whole taxi. Fares are charged on the meter or discussed in advance.

Post

Stamps can be bought at souvenir shops, hotels and in the post offices around town. The larger outlets are open Monday to Friday 8.00 to 16.15 and Saturday 8.00 to 11.45 and you find the main post office on:

Address: Avenue du Prince Moulay Abdellah, Agadir
