Singapore is an Asian melting pot of fascinating crossroad between East and West. Here the hypermodern buildings of the financial district blend with Chinatown's classic small houses. As an old trading town, Singapore is the natural place for anyone who wants to shop – the range is enormous.

In addition, Singapore offers a cuisine with influences from all corners of Asia that exceeds the highest expectations.

THE CITY

Singapore is clean, safe and efficient and the inhabitants are as proud of this as they are of the city's great financial heart beating around the clock. The harbour is the busiest in the world and capital flows on the stock exchange. All the world's banks, insurance companies and investors are represented here.

In 200 years, Singapore has gone from being a deserted island to an eminent industrial nation and major financial power, as reflected in the flourishing townscape.

A good start for anyone who wants to experience Singapore today, with its mixture of old and new, is to have a drink on Boat Quay in the late afternoon. The renovated harbour district is packed with bars and restaurants. People from the financial district also meet here after work to socialise.

Another traditional watering hole is Raffles Hotel, built in the Colonial style. Is there anything more embedded in mystic than to drink a Singapore Sling in the hotel's Long Bar? It is a fantastic environment for a drink, the perfect way to experience Singapore and perhaps the very best way of all to experience the meeting between the city's exciting history and modern times.

Anyone who is looking for the original Singapore might like to head for the crowds of Chinatown where fortune-tellers, calligraphers and temple visitors are a permanent feature of everyday life. In Little India you will find the best Sari fabrics and lots of exciting spices. Don't miss the small shops on Arab Street either.

DO & SEE

Singapore is a hectic metropolis with bustling street life. Here are many sights to see and you can experience everything from a drink at legendary Raffles Hotel to meeting tigers.

Trick Eye Museum

This is a museum like no other. Trick Eye is short for 'Trick of the eye', which refers to an art technique that turns two-dimensional paintings into three-dimensional images through the use of optical illusions. With that, 2D paintings on the museum walls, floors and ceilings appear to pop out of the surface and come to life. Visitors are more than welcome to explore the various themed galleries with their eyes, hands and even cameras. Step inside the paintings to complete a visual narrative with your creative poses, and watch a "tricky" story unfold before your camera. At Trick Eye Museum, you'll be creating unforgettable memories with friends and family amid fun and laughter, with a dash of educational and cultural enrichment. Get ready to let your imagination march into a miraculous dimension of original 3D artworks.

Singapore Zoo

The Singapore Zoo is a so called "open zoo" and it is a world famous zoological garden with 315 animal species, of which approximately 60 are endangered. You can find all the big cats here: lion, tiger, jaguar, leopard and puma, also rare white tigers. If you want to, you can meet orangutans face-to-face. Most of the animals are kept in spacious, landscaped enclosures separated from the visitors by dry or wet moats. Dangerous animals are housed in landscaped glass-fronted enclosures. The park also offers an exciting night safari.

Dempsey Hill

During colonial days, this area housed British military barracks. Today it has been revamped into a shopping, eating and lifestyle area with lush gardens and spa-like ambience. This is a great place to get away for the weekend! Grab a taxi from Orchard Road and spend a day antiques and relaxing in this colonial hotspot.

Address: Dempsey Hill, Singapore

Chinatown

Construction of the Chinese district of Singapore started in 1828 and started out rougher, more cramped and crowded than it is today. Most of it has been renovated, but the narrow streets and shops remain, as do several large markets. Drop into the Peoples Park Complex shopping centre and Chinatown Complex market and the experience is even more amazing.

DINING

Singapore is an unparalleled city when it comes to food – a number of major Asian cuisines blend with the best of the Occident. Indian, Malay, Japanese, Chinese and Singapore's own cuisine meets in Singapore and the result is a fantastic choice, both in terms of the number of restaurants and the quality.

In Singapore you can eat cheap and tasty at one of the twenty something hawker centres - earlier they were open air complexes selling a variety of food, today they are slowly being replaced by indoor and air-conditioned food courts. If you prefer the opposite, but still tasty, you may chose to eat extremely expensive and luxuriously in skyscraper restaurants!

Newton Food Centre

This is a traditional and major hawker centre in Newton, Singapore. The centre is often promoted as a tourist attraction in itself and here you can find practically everything when it comes to food: fishball noodles, satay, fried oysters and lobsters.

-"A hawker centre or cooked food centre is the name given to open-air complexes in Hong Kong, Malaysia, Singapore and Riau Islands, housing many stalls that sell a variety of inexpensive food".

SHOPPING

Shopping is a national sport in Singapore and there is an enormous range in all price brackets to choose from. The artery of Singapore's shopping life is naturally Orchard Road where the largest and most well-known department stores are lined up. Moreover, there are lots of shopping centres and markets around the city.

Anyone who is after a bargain is smart enough to check the prices at home before leaving, just to have something with which to make a comparison. Not everything is cheap, but watches, clothes, cloth, gold, spices and jade are definitely found at a good price.

Orchard Road

Orchard Road is the main shopping street in Singapore. There are department stores and shopping centres at an incomparable range which beats most. Anyone who wants, could easily add a few days to their trip just to walk up and down Orchard Road.

Airports

The airport in Singapore is called Changi and like everything else in the city, it is a miracle of efficiency. All services are provided locally and it is recognised as one of the best airports in the world. Both its terminals are linked by a skytrain which operates both at the transit and public areas and Terminal 3. Obviously, the shopping is high class here as well.

Transportation to and from the city is excellent as the end station of one of the routes on the MRT tube is at the airport. The tube is also the cheapest and fastest way to the city. A taxi to the city takes around 30 minutes.

Budget transport to the city and other parts of the island can also be by bus or by train. Terminals are located at the basement of Terminals 1 and 2. Prepare the exact fare for buses as no change will be given. If you choose to go by train, you would have to switch trains at EW4 - Tanah Merah MRT Station to get downtown.

A Ground Transport Centre (GTC) is available at the Arrival Hall of both Terminals.

For more details on time tables and fares, pick up a copy of the MRT brochure at the Changi Airport MRT Station.

Public Transport

The MRT (Mass Rapid Transit) tube with its driver-free trains is the artery of Singapore's local transport. The network comprises three main lines which link up the city. The train runs from early in the morning until midnight and it is clean, fast and very safe. Tickets and different types of reduced rate tickets can be bought at all stations.

Singapore also has an extensive network of buses that cover local transport in areas to which MRT does not go. Buses are cheap and proportionately comfortable. There are buses both with and without air conditioning. In both cases, you save money by buying a bus ticket.

Taxi

Flexible and easy – there are a great many taxis in Singapore which all use taximeters. Taxis are cheap even if there is a surcharge at night time and for driving through certain areas during rush-hour traffic. There are a few large taxi companies of which Comfort is the largest.
