Grand Parc - Bordeaux, France

Grand Parc - Bordeaux, France

Dulup

An exciting history, an unbeatable wine culture and world-class gastronomy lead visitors to speak in lyrical terms about Bordeaux. Large, charming pedestrianised streets in the centre make the city attractive for shopping while the evenings have the attractions of the opera, bars, shows and dance. Above all, Bordeaux is a city to enjoy.

THE CITY

Since the time of the Romans, the noble grape has been worshipped in the Bordeaux region and today there are no other places which are so obviously associated with quality wine. This is something which influences a large part of everyday life. Every street in the city is thronged with wine merchants and the wine chateaux, of which there are over 100, offering their visitors tastings. Wine therapy—a spa with grape extract—is said to be beneficial for the body and is offered at several of the hotels.

The beautiful Baroque buildings which were once erected in the city centre to conceal the slums, make a great display. Today, Bordeaux is a modern city with historic charm, among other things it has what is perhaps the newest-looking trams Europe can offer. A walk along the River Garonne, or along the city's pedestrianized streets and squares, constantly provides fresh discoveries. In the "golden triangle," where the most important shopping streets cross each other, an abundance of opportunities are on offer to taste the region's cuisine, or just to have a coffee after bargain-hunting in the shops.

SHOPPING

Bordeaux's luxury shops are situated in a district called "the golden triangle," between Cours de l'intendance, Cours Georges Clemenceau and Allées de Tourny. Here you will find Cartier, Louis Vuitton, Longchamps, Kenzo, Hermes and Dior. Look for bargains in the young and trendy shops on rue St. Catherine and rue Porte-Dijeaux: Galeries Lafayette, Levi's, Disney Store, Foot Locker, Lacoste, Zara, H&M.

There are antique shops and art studios all around the main streets. There are also nice little shops on rue du Pas-Saint-Georges and rue des Remparts.

Bordeaux is world-famous for its wine. The Médoc region extends for 100 kilometres in each direction. There are more than 100 wine chateaux to visit and they usually have their own shops. In the city's streets and squares there are plenty of wine merchants. One of the oldest and more popular wine merchants is Badie (at 60, Allée de Tourny).

Sunday is the day to get up early and visit the Campagnad market, which is situated beside the River Garonne. You can find everything here from homemade jam jars to paintings by local artists. On Saturdays, there is a market at Saint Michel where second hand clothes, spices and vegetables are sold.

Locally-made goose liver and goat cheese are sold at the Marché Capucins (Saturdays). At the Centre Commercial Saint Christoly and the Galerie des Grand Hommes department store there are innumerable shops, cafés and fast food outlets. If you like sweets things, Baillardran on Grand Hommes is an orgy of cakes, pastries and sweets.

The shops are closed on Sundays. This is also the case for department stores.
