"Mother Prague has clutches" Franz Kafka wrote, nearly one hundred years ago. Prague's convoluted streets may keep you in those clutches, loving every second of it. Anyone who has wandered around the cobbled streets and Gothic alleyways, seeing the moon hover behind the towers and pinnacles of Europe's most beautiful capital, will definitely come back.

THE CITY

After the 'Velvet Revolution' in 1989, Prague has been an international metropolis with all the usual trappings—but it has also managed successfully to retain its unspoiled local character. The Czech capital is small and compact, with hospody (beerhouses) that offer the world's best beers stationed on every street corner. The most important areas are the central districts of the city: Staré Město (Old Town), Josefov, Nové Město (New Town), and Malá Strana (Lesser Town). These are best explored on foot. In recent years, the district of Vinohrady (Vineyards) has established itself as the district favoured by Pražani (the Prague inhabitants), and the restaurants and cafés lie closely packed.

When you visit Prague, it is worth remembering that not only does the city boast an impressive history, which stretches back many hundreds of years, but it has also fostered exciting architects, artists, and designers of the 20th century. Prague was once the centre of Central European modernism, a fact which today, after a long period of dictatorship, has almost faded into oblivion. During recent years, modernist Czech architecture and interior design have experienced a recovery, and there is nearly always a good exhibition to see.

Address: Staroměstské náměstí 1, Prague

Obecní dům (Municipal House)

This art nouveau palace was erected after the right-wing revolution, which, during the second half of the 19th century, came to transform Prague into a modern capitalist city. Before the inauguration in 1911, all of the Czech artist elite of the time, helped to create what is today one of Europe's finest art nouveau monuments. The building was renovated from 1994-97 and houses a gallery, a beer cellar, and a bar.

Photo: satanoid

Many international cuisines have been introduced to the Prague restaurant scene, but the Central European fare still dominates. Classic, Czech homely meals include Svíčková (roast beef with cream sauce), and the national dish, Vepřo-knedlo-zelo (pork with sauerkraut and dumplings). These can be had at any hospoda—beerhouse—along with a cold pilsner.

Alchemist

The luxury restaurant Alchemist provides a kitsch variant of Prague's history. Blood-red curtains, Louis XIV chairs and candelabras characterise the furnishings. The cuisine is original Italian and the service is excellent.

Prague has always been a good town for cafés. Around the turn of the last century this meant large middle class premises—which re-opened during the 1990's—and after the Velvet Revolution of 1989, a lot of smaller, cosy cafés opened with bric-à-brac décor.

Café Slavia

Of all Prague's old, traditional cafés, Slavia is the most well-known. This is where members of the Czech avant-garde would sit in the early 1900's, and, during the Communist era, dissidents used to gather here, the secret police spying from only a couple of tables away. The view towards Prague Castle is simply stunning, but if you get tired of it, you can always look at the fine painting, 'the Absinthe Drinker.'

SHOPPING

If you want to shop for uniquely Czech products in Prague, you should visit the small boutiques selling domestic designer clothes, and look for reproductions of the utility designs created by Czech modernists in the 1920's and 1930's—both sectors have grown considerably in recent years. Another traditional item to shop for is Bohemian cut glass.

Designer Clothes

Even though there are no exact shopping areas for smaller shops with designer clothing, you will encounter a small concentration of them on Karoliny Světlé and Bartolomějská streets, in New Town. Boutiques such as Leeda, Toalette and Alice Abraham offer a good starting point.

Address: Karoliny Světlé street Bartolomějská stree, Prague

Main Shopping Areas

Prague's main shopping areas are situated in New Town: on Václavské náměstí (Wenceslas Square), and, immediately below, on the pedestrian mall Na Příkopě. There are large individual shops and chain stores such as H&M, Zara, and Marks & Spencers, as well as several large department stores.

Address: Václavské náměstí (Wenceslas Square), Prague

Antiques and Art

If you take a stroll from the market place Havelské tržiště in Old Town, across Michalská street, you will find several antique shops and stores displaying typical Prague artwork on the way.

Address: Havelské tržiště in Old Town, Prague

Cut glass

The Czech Republic is deservedly well-known for its cut glass, and a wide range is on offer at the shops around Staroměstské náměstí (Old Town Square).

Address: Staroměstské náměstí (Old Town Square), Prague

Czech Design

The work of young Czech designers can be found at Qubus on Ramova 3, around the corner from the square. Anyone who wants modernist design in the form of cubism or functionalism visit the shop Kubista on Celetná 34/Ovocný trh 12, also close to the Old Town Square.

Address: Rámová 3, Prague
