THE CITY

mariosp

Oxford was known as "Oxenaforda" in the early times. It means "Ford of the Oxen", where fords were utilised by the people to walk or drive across the river or stream. Oxford also became a significant location for military frontier between the kingdoms of Mercia and Wessex. The achievement of Oxford was enhanced by a charter granted by King Henry II. It grants its citizens the same privileges, exemptions and important religious houses as those enjoyed by the citizens at the capital of the kingdom.

To date, Oxford city is a bustling cosmopolitan town where ancient University still rises as its attractions. The city offers a wide range of guest houses, hotels, apartments and self-catering accommodations for its tourists and residents. Oxford is also now a growing hi-tech community where many businesses are established. Take time to find the right place for you whether for dining, chilling out or taking a rest. This city definitely has something for everyone.

The Westwood Hotel

This hotel rests just 2 miles from the center of the famous City of Dreaming Spires, surrounded by 400 acres of woodland and grounds. This dream has now been fulfilled with a hotel that provides a relaxing blend of elegance and warmth to all guests.

Built in 1910 as a charming Edwardian gentleman's residence, the hotel offers a true haven of tranquility and a relaxed country house atmosphere. Many of the 20 bedrooms have been recently refurbished, each individually styled to provide maximum comfort and convenience during your stay. With different shapes and sizes to suit all requirements, the rooms all benefit from private bathrooms with bathtubs and/or shower rooms, the facilities listed in "room descriptions" as well as fluffy cotton towels.

Many rooms enjoy fabulous views of the grounds and woods, adding to the country house atmosphere. The hotel is fully licensed and guests are welcome to have a drink at the bar or on the terrace and dine in the restaurant. Alternatively, meals and snacks can be served in your room (for an additional fee).
