New York is pure energy. It has been the backdrop for many movies with its bright lights and bustling streets, like those found in luminous Times Square. Upon arrival, visitors to the city are greeted by one of the nation's grandest symbols of freedom, the Statue of Liberty. Like Lady Liberty, everything about New York is larger than life. The Empire State Building is the third-tallest building in the nation, and the 19-building expanse of Rockefeller Center includes Radio City Music Hall and houses the offices of major industries and television studios. Although New York's contributions to theater are undeniable, catching a Broadway show is a far cry from your only entertainment option. New York is also the home of world-renowned music venue Carnegie Hall. Multiple sports teams also call New York home.

THE CITY

Photo: DoctorWho

New York City may be small in size, but it's huge in numbers. It's the most densely populated city in North America with 8 million citizens on just 830 square kilometers of land.

It has always been a city of immigrants, and, even today, about one-third of its citizens are foreign-born. Roughly 138 languages are spoken here, and vibrant new ethnic enclaves pop up all over the city, offering visitors a vast array of interesting cultural and culinary experiences.

While the city pulses with the blood of its newest residents, old New York is still alive and well. Opera still bursts from the venerable stage of Lincoln Center. Wall Street, the hive of capitalism, still bustles with the excitement and tension of the stock market. And the stately apartments of New York's wealthy still frame the majestic Central Park.

Usually when people speak of New York they mean Manhattan, but New York City is made up of five boroughs: The Bronx, Brooklyn, Manhattan, Queens and Staten Island. Visitors with a little extra time on their hands should at least pay a visit to Brooklyn with the hipster headquarters in Williamsburg, and stroll along memories of the olden days at the Coney Island boardwalk.

New York has become one of America's safest cities, and the best way to see it is to walk. Numbered streets in Manhattan make navigation easy and run from east to west, avenues intersect from north to south (uptown and downtown).

New Yorkers are—contrary to their reputation—friendly and talkative, and nearly every night of the week the city's bars and clubs are crowded with revelers. There are several universities in New York, which contribute to keeping the city fresh and young.

DO & SEE

Photo: SachinDaluja

You'll never run out of things to do in New York. Hitting all of the major sights in one trip requires ambition—but, hey, New Yorkers are ambitious, if nothing else. Choose between visiting the Metropolitan Museum of Art, taking a stroll in Central Park, making a trip to Ellis Island to see the stately Statue of Liberty, popping in to see the squid and the whale at the Museum of Natural History, experiencing a Papaya hot dog, seeing a Broadway show, or, going on a "Sex and the City" tour.

Statue of Liberty / Ellis Island

The Statue of Liberty was a gift to the United States from the French in 1886. The robed female represents the Roman goddess of freedom, she holds a torch and a tabula ansata with the inscribed date of the American Declaration of Independence. When immigrants arrived by boat in the late 19th century, the first sight they saw was the Statue of Liberty—an enduring symbol of the American dream.

Address: Battery Park, New York

Opening hours: Daily 08.30-17.30, boats go every 30 minutes.

Times Square

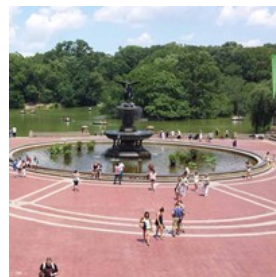

Times Square consists of the blocks between 6th and 9th Avenue and 39th and 52nd streets. The name originates from the fact that the New York Times once had its headquarters here. Today, families bask safely in the neon glow of the square's massive, illuminated advertisements, and constant bustle. It's the face of a safer (and wealthier) Manhattan.

Address: Times Square, New York

More Info: 42nd Street and Broadway

Central Park

The "lungs of the city," Central Park is Manhattan's largest and most beautiful green space. The park consists of 843 acres. It is 2.5 miles (4 kilometers) long and one half mile (804 meters) wide. The park is constantly bustling with various activities, events and concerts. A great way to see the park is to hire a bike. You find different bike rental shops both in the outskirts as well as inside the park.

League of Kitchens

The League of Kitchens is an immersive culinary adventure in NYC where immigrants teach intimate cooking workshops in their homes, and participants encounter a new culture, cuisine, and neighborhood with every experience. This participatory learning / cooking / eating / sharing experience starts with an interactive cooking lesson and leads into a celebratory dinner.

Workshops take place on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon, include 5-6 participants and are designed to offer something for all levels—from beginner cooks to professional chefs. Instruction is hands-on and interactive, and the instructors act as teachers, hosts, and cultural ambassadors.

The League of Kitchens has been featured in the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, Tasting Table, Serious Eats, the NY Daily News, Daily Candy, and PRI's the World, among others. Conde Nast Traveler called the League of Kitchens "quite possibly the coolest foodie thing to do in NYC whether you're a visitor or local."

For a complete list of workshops visit our website. Follow the League of Kitchens on twitter @LeagueOfKitchen, Instagram @LeagueOfKitchen, and Facebook, www.facebook.com/leagueofkitchens.

World Trade Center and 9/11 Memorial

11th of September 2001 is a date New Yorkers never will forget. That day, the sky scrapers of World Trade Centers were target for a terrorist attack and nearly 3,000 people were killed. After this horrifying incident, a museum, 9/11 Memorial, has opened up at the spot and now, almost 15 years after the attack, five sky scrapers have been risen towards the sky again. 1 World Trade Center is now the tallest building in the Western Hemisphere and that it is 1,776 feet (541 m) is not just a coincident, 1776 is the year when the United States Declaration of Independence were ratified.

Competition between bars and restaurants in New York is fierce. With so many new establishments opening daily, everybody's got to have a niche to distinguish their place from the rest. You'll be amazed at the variety of coffees, hot chocolates, wines, or desserts on a single menu. And you'll wonder how specialty establishments who only sell cupcakes, pudding, raw food, or whiskey even survive. It's consumer heaven for those who like lots of options.

While the legendary New York steakhouses and diners are still popular among locals and tourists alike, getting adventurous with the thousands of ethnic restaurants is where the real fun begins. Waiters should be tipped 15-20%.

JFK International Airport

New York is served by three major airports and JFK is maybe the most known one of them all. You can take public transportation or taxis to Manhattan from all airports. There is a flat-rate taxi fare from JFK to Manhattan, but there are also subway and public transport options. You find a car at a taxi rank outside each terminal building. The flat rate starts at $52.

To reach the stops for public transport, you need to use the AirTrain in most cases.

The metro from JFK to Midtown Manhattan takes approx. 60-75 minutes and costs from $2.50.

There are also different bus services. The local transport company MTA operates three different lines going to nearby neighborhoods. The fare is the same as for the metro.

The NYC Airporter is a direct bus line from JFK to Grand Central Station and Penn Station. A single ticket costs $16 and the journey takes approx. 60 minutes depending on traffic. You can buy tickets online or at the NYC Airporter counter inside the airport.

Newark International Airport

Newark International Airport is located in New Jersey and from here you can choose to take a taxi, train or bus to go to the city.

If taxi is your choice of transport, you will find cars waiting outside the arrival hall. The fare from Newark to Manhattan starts at $50 and it takes from 35 minutes to reach New York City.

There is an AirTrain, transporting passengers from the arrival hall to the trains (NJ TRANSIT or Amtrak train) and the ticket for the AirTrain costs $5.50. It takes approx. 45 minutes from the airport to Penn station and the fee is $11.55 one way.

The Newark Airport Express Bus costs $16 one way or $28 round trip. The journey takes about 50 minutes and it stops at Grand Central Station, Bryant Park and Port Authority Bus Terminal.

LaGuardia Airport

This is the airport located closest to Manhattan and therefore you can choose from many different transportations.

There are public buses as well as the shuttle, NYC Airporth, that goes directly between the airport and Port Authority Bus Terminal, Grand Central Station and Penn Station. The fare is $13. The public bus costs from $2.50 and you can pay with a metrocard or the exact change.

Taxis and vans are also available at the taxi rank outside the terminal building. The price for travelling to Mid Manhattan starts at $25.

Time Zone

New York is in the Eastern time zone, and all times are reflected in Eastern time.

Public Transport

If you're going somewhere too far to walk, the subway is the way to go. Most subway lines travel up and down Manhattan, while buses travel across. Subways run 24-hours a day, 7 days a week. You can buy a one week unlimited Metrocard if you know you will travel a lot. Ticket machines in subway stations accept both cash, credit and debit cards. Subway maps are free from all ticket or information booths.

Internet: www.mta.info

Taxi

You can hail a yellow cab on almost any street corner. Taxis are inexpensive and an easy way to travel. There are nighttime and rush hour surcharges. Remember to leave a tip. Manhattan has very long streets and avenues and it's important to know both the address and the cross street of your destination. A taxi is vacant if the yellow light on top of the car is completely lit.

Post

You can buy stamps at many newsagents or at the post office. Official United States Postal Services (USPS) mailboxes are usually blue steel containers on city sidewalks. Many post offices or private mail companies like UPS or FedEx are open 8a.m.-5p.m. You find the main post office, known as the James Farley Post Office, close to Penn Station.
